FRIDAY'S SIMPLY SMITTEN

SEPTEMBER 27, 2019

Happy Friday! September has been a busy month so far and it looks as if it will not slow down anytime soon. After a semi-slow summer, it was a shock to the system to jump headfirst into events and meetings galore. But I have been enjoying myself tremendously and have been loving seeing my friends on a more regular basis.

Last weekend, as I have mentioned, I spoke on a panel for the NYC Blogger Union Meetup. Going into it I wasn't nervous about the topic of conversation, more about sounding articulate and not saying "umm... like" a lot. Well I have to toot my own horn as I think I killed it! A woman came up to me after the discussion and said how impressed she was with me- how articulate I sounded and how motivating my talk was. She suggested I should start my own Podcast. Starting a podcast is something I do toy with but have yet to dive deep into what I want to discuss and if I want to do it solo or not. And especially if this is something I would be motivated enough to continue and work on each week. Maybe someday I will pull the plug and just do it. But I want to make sure I am all in before I do. I would like to be a guest on a few Podcasts prior to making this decision to see if I like it. So if you have a Podcast I would love to be on it! Anyway, after the discussion I was thinking back through the topics of conversation and I realized how much speaking on the panel really helped me. It not only gave me a new wave of motivation, but it also gave me a boost of confidence to know that I actually know what I am talking about. I also learned a lot from Natalia, the other speaker on the panel. Listening to her tips and advice has given me ways to tweak my work. You can never stop learning- especially in this business.

Wednesday was a little wild with 3 events in one evening. I started with the launch party for Elizabeth Sutton's new collection of leather goods; lots of unique, colorful clutches and shoulder bags. The event was held downtown at the Wall Street Grill. It was a beautiful evening to be on the rooftop, chatting with friends and drinking wine.
